The Reverend Alexander Miller of Virginia and Some of His Descendants

By MILO CUSTER

Rev. Alexander Miller was of Scotch descent and was born at Antrim, Ireland, about the year 1720. His wife's maiden name was Jane Evans and she was a native of the city of Glasgow, Scotland. Rev. Miller was a graduate of Edinburgh University, having the degree of M.A. He was a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and was first licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Route, and his licensure reported to the General Synod of Ireland in 1745. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Letterkenny at the "New Erection" in the Parish of Ardstraw, (Clady Congregation,) County Tyrone, Ireland, November 4, 1746. He was pastor of Clady Congregation until June 21, 1749. He was also at one time a member of the Synod of Dungannon. He emigrated to America sometime between the last mentioned date and the 25th of May, 1753, at which time he appeared before the Synod of Philadelphia and asked to be permitted to preach as a member of that body. Owing to certain technicalities which had to be observed his request was not granted until May 26, 1756, when in answer to a repeated supplication from the congregations of Cooks Creek and Peaked Mountain, in that part of Augusta now called Rockingham County, Virginia, he was admitted to the Synod of Philadelphia, and Presbytery of Donegal, Pa., and was installed as the first regular pastor of Cooks Creek (near Dayton, Va.) and Peaked Mountain, August 1, 1757.

On the 17th of November, 1756, Rev. Miller purchased three hundred acres of land of Samuel Semple for a consideration of ninety shillings. The boundaries of this tract as described in the record of the deed at Staunton, Virginia, are as follows: "Beginning at two Pines and a Hickory on the South side of the Hunters Spring, draft thence North West one hundred and Sixty Poles crossing a Branch and Meadow to two Pines and South thirty-five Degrees West one Hundred and eighty Poles to a Pine and South East Eighty-four Poles to two white (oaks?) and South two hundred and thirty Poles to two Pines and South East Sixty Poles Crossing a Branch to three White oaks and North Seventeen Degrees East three hundred and Eighty-five poles to the Beginning." This tract is situated in Rockingham County, Virginia, about four miles southwest of Harrisonburg. A peculiar clause relating to the property, probably required by the laws and customs of the time, was inserted in this deed as follows: "And during the full term and time of one whole year from thence next ensuing, and fully to be complete and indeed Yielding and Paying therefor the Rent of one Pepper Corn on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, if the same shall be lawfully demanded."

Rev. Alexander Miller served the congregation of Peaked Mountain as their pastor until October 7, 1762, and Cooks Creek until May 1, 1763. He was one of the ten members of the Hanover, (Va.,) Presbytery when it was reorganized in 1758. He was appointed to several missionary stations in southwestern Virginia and western North Carolina in 1771, and the latest mention of him in the records of the Presbyterian Church in America is found in a report made to the Synod of Philadelphia by the Hanover Presbytery in 1774. He appears to have been a man of strong opinions and staunch convictions and was possessed of an extreme independence of the wills of other men. The last mention I find of him in any record is dated October 3, 1775.

Settling in Virginia when that country was new and infested with many hostile bands of Indians, his experiences must have been trying to say the least. His remains, those of his wife and his son Alexander and wife lie buried in the old "Cooks Creek Cemetery," four miles southwest of Harrisonburg, Virginia, (near the town of Dayton.) In later years this old cemetery was abandoned and a mill dam was built across the creek below the burying ground in such a way that the water of the dam backed up and completely covered all the old graves. The old church where Miller and several of his successors preached was torn down about the year 1780 and the stones of which it was constructed were used in building the mill-dam. A new church, (the second building on the present site,) was built in 1834, at a place about four miles north of the site of the first one, and to it was given the name of "New Erection," probably in memory of the old "New Erection" in Ardstraw, County Tyrone, Ireland, where Miller first preached. The name was also probably bestowed by Rev. Miller's son, Alexander, who was the chief supporter of the enterprise and the donor of the land upon which the new church was built. The latter is referred to as the founder of this church.

The exact date of Rev. Alexander Miller's emigration from Ireland to America is not yet known, but it is probable that he settled in Virginia about the year 1750, as the first mention of him in the records of the Presbyterian church in America occurs under date of May 25, 1753, and it is said that he had preached as an assistant to the Rev. John Craig for several years prior to that date. Of his immediate family very little is now known, but he had (at least) two sons, whose names were John and Alexander. The son, John Miller, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, January 10, 1749, but the date of birth of the other son is not known to me.

The writer's sources of information for this biographical sketch of Rev. Alexander Miller, are (1) A brief manuscript history of his ancestors, written by the late Dr. Alexander Miller, of Richmond, Kentucky, in 1850, and which is now in possession of his granddaughter, Mrs. Belle Miller Reynolds, of Kansas City, Mo. (This Dr. Alexander Miller was a grandson of Rev. Alexander Miller); (2) A copy of the official records of the Presbyterian church in America from 1708 to 1788, published at Philadelphia in 1841, owned by Mr. George P. Davis, of Bloomington, Ill.; (3) Certain extracts from the county records of Augusta and Rockingham counties, Virginia, (kept at Staunton and Harrisonburg, Va.) copied by Miss Maude R. Snyder, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Miss Verdie C. Rhodes, of Dale Enterprise, Va., (both of whom are descendants of Rev. Alexander Miller); (4) Waddell's History of Augusta county, Va.; (5) Webster's History of the Presbyterian Church; and (6) certain extracts from the records of the Presbyterian church in Ireland, kindly furnished me by the Rev. William James Lowe, (clerk to the Presbyterian General Assembly of Ireland), of Edenbank, Londonderry, Ireland.

The following extract from the manuscript auto-biography of Dr. Alexander Miller may be of some interest to the readers of this volume. It was written May 4, 1850:

"I was raised in Rockingham county, state of Virginia, one of the best portions of that state. The residents of the valley were mostly descendants of Irish and Scottish parents, attached to education, industry and morality. * * * Religious instruction was given principally by the Presbyterians and Methodists. * * * I studied medicine under the instruction of Dr. P. Harrison, in Harrisonburg, who was an eminent physician: a pious and very worthy man. I left home for Kentucky on April 3, 1806. I opened shop in Richmond the 15th of May, 1806, rented a shop about the place where Owen Walker's store is located. I rented of John Burnam. I boarded with Messrs. Robert Miller and family who, with all their connections, treated me in the kindest manner, indeed. My large patronage from the citizens of Madison and the surrounding counties was unprecedented. I had some opposition which under the circumstances was advantageous in more ways than one, it kept me more circumspect in my intercourse with all I had to do, and as I was very young it made me read and study books on medicine and general science, so as to be as well prepared in my profession as possible. * * * I was named for my father's father, who was a Presbyterian clergyman, and I was early informed that I was to fill his shoes in the clerical line, but during my educational progress I took to the pursuit of medicine." * * *

Isaac Miller entered July 5, 1841. August 12, 1843, he purchased of Zachariah Simmons, a forty-acre tract adjoining for $100. This farm is located directly south of the McLean County Farm and about five miles south of the city of Bloomington, Ill. This farm is one of the best in Central Illinois, and the land which lies almost perfectly level, is now worth upwards of $200 per acre. December 5, 1854, Isaac Miller sold this farm to Milton and Mason Miller for two thousand two hundred dollars and removed to a smaller farm nearer the city, where he died a few years later. He was one of the pioneer farmers of McLean county, Ill., and his experiences as such were common to all the early settlers. The children of Isaac Miller and Mary (Anderson) Miller were as follows:

(1) Sanford C. Miller, born Oct. 18, 1822, married (1st) ~~Miss~~ Melissa Hill ~~(née Depew)~~, (who died April 10, 1851) December 25, 1845; (2nd) Rachel White, Dec. 19, 1851, and died in Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 12, 1863.

(2) Samuel B. Miller, born January 26, 1824, married Martha Ashburn, Dec. 5, 1847, and died in Kansas Dec. 30, 1862.

(3) Jacob Anderson Miller, born Sept. 6, 1826, married Mary A. Trimble July 20, 1854, and died in Kansas City, Kansas. Sept. —, 1900.

Aug. 12, 1861, and was discharged Dec. 6, 1865, having been promoted to the rank of sergeant during his term of service. He married Almira C. Hewitt, June 3, 1868. He was Chief of Police of Bloomington, Ill., in 1878 and 1879. In 1880 he removed to North Dakota. Bolinger, of Jamestown, North Dakota; Frank Miller, of Missoula, Mont., and Mrs. May Kneebone, of San Diego, Cal.

JAMES T. MILLER.

James T. Miller, son of the second Alexander Miller, and Sarah Crawford (?) and grandson of Rev. Alexander Miller, was born in Rockingham county, Va., Aug. 3, 1795. Aug. 14, 1814, he enlisted in Captain Thomas Hopkins Co., Virginia militia, for service against the British during the War of 1812. He served in this war about three months, being discharged Dec. 8, 1814. For this service Mr. Miller, received a pension in later years, and a land warrant entitling him to 160 acres of government land. His widow also received a pension after his death. The land warrant he gave to his son, Martillous Miller. On Jan. 28, 1821, at Orange Court House, Orange county, Va., James T. Miller was married to Sarah Loyd. Their wedding ceremony was performed by a Baptist minister named Canaday. After the wedding Mr. Miller took his bride on their wedding trip. They rode on horseback from the home of the bride's parents in Orange county, over the Blue Ridge Mountains, to the home of Mr. Miller's parents in Rockingham county, a distance of over forty miles. It is said that Mrs. Miller often told her children that her husband's parents (who were of Scotch-Irish parentage), spoke such a "broad Irish brogue" that she could hardly understand them. Her own parents were of Welsh and English descent. About the year 1830, James T. Miller and his family moved to Montgomery Co., Tennessee, and located at a place near the line of Christian county, Ky. They lived there only a few years when they again moved, this time to McLean county, Ill., in the fall of the year 1834, traveling the whole distance in a covered wagon, the only means of conveyance available at that time. Fifteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller, ten sons and five daughters. Of this large number their parents could say that they lived to see all of them married and with children of their own, except one son (John W.), who was married but had no children. (Three of these fifteen children are still living, viz.: Thomas G. Miller, Alexander Miller, and Mrs. Mildred A. Peck.) When James T. Miller first came to McLean county, Ill., in the fall of 1834, he rented a log cabin and forty acres of land of George Hinshaw, Sr. This cabin stood a few rods south of the old No. 7 or "Hinshaw" school-house (now called No. 84), on the Springfield road, about 2½ miles southwest of the city of Bloomington, Ill. (Sec. 17, Bloomington township.) This cabin had but one room and no floor. It was very poor indeed, but houses were so scarce in this part of the country in those early times that it was the best shelter Mr. Miller could obtain. Mr. Miller spent the winter of 1834 and '35 and the following summer at this place, farming the land he had rented of Hinshaw. In the fall of the year 1835 Mr. Miller purchased two hundred and twenty acres of land of Lemuel Foster. The land was purchased by contract, Mr. Miller not receiving his deed for the land until Dec. 12, 1853. This land is situated partly in section 17, Bloomington township, and partly in Sec. 25, Dale township, McLean county, Ill. The deed conveying this land to James T. Miller, is recorded in Book V, page 746, McLean Co. Deed Records. The amount of consideration named therein is two thousand dollars. (The same land is now worth about $200 per acre.) This farm is now owned by Mr. William Haines. It is said that Mrs. Miller, often told her friends that after she and her husband moved into their new home they had but $10 in money left—and ten children. Nevertheless an untiring patience and persevering wills soon made them masters of their financial affairs and it was not many years until their farm was paid for and their older children grown too maturity were able to provide for themselves. James T. Miller and his wife were both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for many years their home was a regular preaching place for the pioneer circuit riders who filled appointments on the old Sangamon, Bloomington, and Randolphs Grove circuits between the years 1835 and 1850. Church buildings were very scarce in rural communities in those times and it was a common custom for the itinerant preacher to accept the use of the neighborhood school-house or the dwelling house of any member of his flock as a place for holding religious services. Among the early Methodist Circuit riders who preached at "Brother Millers" were some of the well known lights of pioneer Methodism in Illinois, viz.: Peter Cartwright, John S. Barger, Wingate J. Newman, Joseph Newman, James C. Rucker (a relative of Mrs. Millers), Samuel H. Martin, William R. Howard, George Rutledge, James Shaw, and others. The early Methodists were not lacking in wit, of which they frequently made use. It was a standing joke among the circuit-riders who were wont to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Miller that the latter's "Hondans" and "Shanghai's" always fled whenever a Methodist preacher hove in sight, so well known was the preachers' great fondness for fried chicken. Mr. Miller's name appears on the record of the first quarterly conference of the Randolph Grove Circuit, held at Funks Grove, Ill., Dec. 29, 1849, at which time and place he was appointed a member of the missionary committee. Mr. Miller continued to reside upon his farm, raising live stock and grain until the year 1855, when he removed to a smaller farm in the timber nearer the city of Bloomington which he had purchased some years previously of a Mr. Leeper. This land is now a part of the farm owned by Mr. James Poindexter, and is located in the north part of Sec. 17, Bloomington township. The house at this place stood on the east side of the Springfield Road (as did also the one previously occupied by Mr. Miller) and about a half mile northeast of the old No. 7, "Hinsbaw," or Dowthett School-house (now No. 84). In 1866 Mr. Miller sold his "prairie farm" (as it was called) to John A. Alexander for $25 per acre. This was considered a good price for improved land in McLean county at that time. Mr. Miller was familiar with all the primitive modes and appliances used by the pioneer farmers of this country during his residence on his "prairie farm," and in his lifetime used nearly all the various primitive implements of husbandry that were invented for planting, cultivating, and harvesting grain. Among these were the cradle and flail, the single and double shovel cultivators, the "barshear" and wooden-mouldboard, breaking plows, the "traveling-machine" (a primitive thresher) and the chaff-piler (another primitive threshing-machine). During the first years of their residence in Illinois, Mrs. Miller spun and wove many a yard of cloth of which clothing was made for her family. James T. Miller died at his home on the farm he bought of Leeper, Nov. 3, 1874. His funeral sermon was preached by his o'd friend, the circuit rider, Rev. John S. Barger, and his remains were laid to rest in the Scogin Cemetery at Lows Grove some two miles west of his former home. The Daily Pantagraph of Nov. 4, 1874, contains the following obituary of Mr. Miller: "Mr. James T. Miller, an old citizen residing two miles southwest of this city on the Springfield road, died (last) Monday at the advanced age of eighty years. The deceased was born in Virginia in 1795, and had been a resident of this county for a great many years. He was a cousin of James Miller, the former State Treasurer. Funeral services will be held today at the Dowthett School-house at 10 o'clock A. M."

Mr. Miller owned ninety-five acres of land at the time of his death, which was sold by the master-in-chancery (at that time Mr. E. M. Prince), and the proceeds divided among the heirs. After her husband's death, Mrs. Miller lived with different members of her large family of children until her own demise which occurred Dec. 13, 1885, at the home of her son, Thomas G. Miller, in Lincoln, Ill. Her remains were buried beside those of her husband in Scogin's Cemetery, and a neat white marble monument now marks their last earthly resting-place. It was the writer's privilege to have seen the face of his great grandmother but once, and that was after her death, and while her remains were at the house of her son, Samuel S. Miller, near Shirley, Ill., on the day of her burial.

CONCLUSION.

To those of my relatives who have assisted me in the publication of this brief history, I offer the same without comment and without apology, trusting that they and their descendants may realize and appreciate the difficulties under which I have labored in its compilation. I extend my sincerest thanks to each and every one who furnished me with material for this record, and I trust that future years may produce another historian among our people who may be able to take up the work where I left off and enlarge and improve upon the same. My correspondence upon this subject has been varied and extensive, I have carefully preserved, bound and indexed every letter of importance I have received pertaining to these matters and it is my intention to deposit them in some safe repository, perhaps in the Library of the McLean County Historical Society at Bloomington, Ill., where they may be examined and read in the future by such of my people as may wish to see them.

MILLO CUSTER.

Bloomington, Illinois, April 3, 1910.

Postscript: I have heard a tradition to the effect that Rev. Alexander Miller, was a son of "Sir John Miller, 'Duke' of Antrim." With reference thereto, I will say that I consider this tradition an error, as Sir Randal MacDonnell was Earl (not Duke) of Antrim from Dec. 10, 1699, to Oct. 19, 1721, when he died and was succeeded by his son, Sir Alexander MacDonnell, who died in the year 1755. The family of MacDonnell have held the Earldom of Antrim since 1636, according to Burkes Peerage, which is a standard authority on this subject. M.C.
